Navigation

The Main Menu

The top menu, circled below, exists on every page on the site.

The menu is “sticky.” That is, wherever you are on the page—middle or bottom—you’ll always see the menu, as show here, “sticking” to the top of the window.

Some of the buttons on the menu show a tiny “down” arrow, indicating that more links will appear beneath it.

The “Go to Top” Icon

As you scroll down on a story, at about mid-page this icon (the circle with the “up” indicator) appears on the right of the story pane and stays in view as you move down. At any point, you can click it and you’ll be automatically scrolled back to the top. (If you happen to narrow your window, the icon will move to the center and show up in the page footer.)

The Explore Tab

Explore is the gateway to most of the site’s contents. Click Explore and this window opens with links to 13 sections of stories and pictures.

The sections are named the same as those on the old websites.

Sidebar Menus

When you choose one of the more expansive section or stories you’ll see a left side menu from which you select either a subsection or one of multiple pages in that topic.

When you reach the initial page of a large section, like Memories, shown here, a side menu will appear, showing the divisions within the section. The menu will remain as long as you’re within that section, or until you go to a story that requires its own menu.

Initial Pages and Contents Pages

Sections like Memories and History that have a great number of stories or other material have Initial pages like the one above, describing the contents within. The initial page will lead you to a Contents page like that below, a list of the individual stories in that subsection. Note the horizontal tabs: “Website Exclusive” displays one list; “Other Sources” shows another.

Breadcrumbs

The Navigation Bar

The Image Enlarge Symbol
